The UFC has released a promotional video ahead of their next pay-per-view event this Saturday night. This may not be the pay-per-view card the promotion initially envisioned after a late scratch robbed it of the co-main event yet UFC 265 will still go on as planned this Saturday from Houston.

An interim heavyweight title tilt tops the bill as former challenger Derrick Lewis welcomes unbeaten Frenchman Cyrille Gane. Two-division women's champion Amanda Nunes was expected to defend her 135-pound title against Julianna Peña until a positive COVID-19 test postponed the affair.

Before they touch gloves inside the Toyota Center, let's take a closer look at the storylines entering this weekend.

UFC 265 will take place at the Toyota Center in Houston, Texas and will feature an interim heavyweight championship bout in the main event as Derrick Lewis will fight in front of his hometown crowd against the surging Cyrille Gane.

UFC 265 PPV card time is scheduled for 10 pm ET / 7 pm PT in the US and 12 pm AEST in Australia.

In the main event former heavyweight title challenger and current No.2-ranked contender Derrick Lewis goes up against the division's ranked No.3 competitor Cyrille Gane. The pair battles it out for the interim heavyweight belt. The championship bout is scheduled for five rounds.

UFC 265 tickets to witness all the action live at the venue are on sale. The location is Toyota Center in Houston, TX. The date is Saturday, August 7. Tickets can be purchased through Vivid Seats.

Derrick Lewis (25-7, 1 NC) is riding the four-win streak. Two of his previous bouts he won via stoppage in the second round against Curtis Blaydes and Aleksei Oleinik. Before that he defeated Ilir Latifi by unanimous decision and took a split decision against Blagoy Ivanov.

Undefeated Cyril Gane (9-0) won two of his previous bouts by unanimous decision against Alexander Volkov and Jairzinho Rozenstruik. Prior to that he TKO'd Junior dos Santos in the second round and scored a UD against Tanner Boser.

The co-main event features a three-round bantamweight battle between Jose Aldo and Pedro Munhoz. The original co-headline bout between two-weight champion Amanda Nunes and Julianna Pena fell off after Nunes tested positive for COVID-19.

Former featherweight champion Aldo (29-7) is coming off the win by unanimous decision against Marlon Vera. Munhoz (19-5, 1 NC) won his previous bout against Jimmie Rivera also by UD. The full UFC 265 fight card can be found below.

An interim heavyweight title headlines the return to Houston for the latest UFC PPV event's time to head back to Texas. UFC is going back to the Lone Star State on Saturday, Aug. 7 for UFC 265 with an interim heavyweight title bout on the marquee. Cyril Gane and Houston native Derrick Lewis will meet in the main event for the interim strap and a likely shot at full champ Francis Ngannou next.

The creation of an interim heavyweight title came as a surprise to many, being announced just three months after Francis Ngannou won the undisputed crown. Regardless, the winner of the fight between Gane and Lewis will end the night with a title belt and a guaranteed shot at Ngannou down the road.

The card took a bit of a hit, however, in the weeks leading up as two-division champion Amanda Nunes, who was expected to defend her bantamweight crown against Julianna Pena, was forced to withdraw after testing positive for COVID-19. It's unclear at this time when the bout could be rescheduled.

Watch UFC 265's pay-per-view (PPV) main event between hometown hero and No. 2-ranked Derrick Lewis taking on undefeated striking sensation and No. 3-seeded Ciryl Gane inside Toyota Center in Houston, Texas, on Aug. 7, 2021. In the co-main event, former UFC Featherweight champion Jose Aldo will lock horns with No. 8-ranked Pedro Munhoz in a pivotal Bantamweight bout that's all but guaranteed to deliver action.
